

Acknowledgements

The study on which this report is based was funded by the Joseph Rowntree Memorial Trust. Their Research Director, Janet Lewis, was most helpful in formulating the research objectives.

The research would not have been possible without the assistance of the many people, too numerous to mention, interviewed in the cities of the case studies and elsewhere.

I was helped also by an advisory group, who gave generously of their time to meet, and to read and comment on this report and an earlier article. This group was chaired by Tim Melville-Ross, Chief Executive of the Nationwide Anglia Building Society. Other members were Charles Carter, President of PSI and Vice-chairman of the Joseph Rowntree Memorial Trust, Alan Kilburn, Chief Executive of North Housing Association, Duncan Maclellan, Director of the Centre for Housing Research, University of Glasgow, Jane Morton, a housing consultant, Richard O'Brien, Chairman of Council, PSI, Stephen Thake, Chief Executive, United Kingdom Housing Trust, Tony Trott, former Director of the National Federation of Housing Co-operatives, and Ted Wakeham, Managing Director of Partnership Renewal of the Built Environment Limited.

Other people who provided helpful advice, and reviewed this report, were Chris Thirkettle of the Housing Department, Glasgow District Council, John Turney of the Housing Department, Borough of Blackburn, Chris Wadhams, Director of Shape Housing Association, and Peter Willmott, Senior Fellow of PSI. Susan Johnson and Clare Morgan of PSI provided valuable assistance.

Michael Carley